is clothing company Japanese label Non-Standard. As an artsy, thoughtful label, Non-Standard are all about conceptual art meets fashion. At their first event in Milan, Non-Standard brought out a host of ideas that ranged from the cute to the awesome. The show saw three Conceptual artists/fashionistas show off their latest work - and it made for a very interesting day of art, fashion, and fun. Of the three exhibitions, visitors could see playfulness, craftsmanship, and inspiration all rolled into one. Each artist designed a dress that would both showcase and/or play with their work - whether it be a creation made from an indigenous material, abstract designs drawn by the artist, or even a tie-in with their upcoming, sold-out album. The exhibit was split in two parts. The first part of the show involved a 12-piece exhibit made by the Jitumon Conceptual art group. Each member of the group had created a specific piece of clothing that merited a stand alone exhibit. The exhibit started off in two different parts. The group's members put on a performance piece, in which they created fashions (traditionally of the "wedge" variety) that gave off eerily foreboding vibes. There was one particularly striking piece, called "Sleeping Man", that was a yellow, mushroom-like piece of clothing, reminiscent of a mushroom cloud. A series of photographs and performance piece depicting a "child inside a flat", by the group Chind, made the second part of the exhibition. While the first part of the show was meant to evoke unease or uneasiness, the second part of the show was meant to evoke lightheartedness and liveliness.
