You may not be aware of it, but you use one or more Windows shortcuts to speed up your Windows tasks. Windows shortcuts can be categorized in three classes: Permanent shortcuts - these shortcuts are embedded in the Windows OS and are "hardwired" to the machine. Exe or shell shortcuts - these are links to executable files and shell commands to run commands in the command prompt or WSL. Shell or batch file shortcuts - these are links to shell scripts in a specified folder. These shortcuts are created by shortcuts.bat or shell.bat files. You may know how to create and edit a shortcut. The problem arises when you want to disable or delete it. To delete a shortcut, right-click on it and delete it from the right-click menu. The problem with this solution is that the shortcut is removed from the menu, but the shortcut itself remains active and can be used to start the application/file. This means that it is possible to use a deleted shortcut to start an application, but you get no menu item to start it. The following procedure will show you how to remove a shortcut from the Windows OS. The procedure requires the following steps: 1. Click on the Start button. 2. Locate and select Run. 3. Locate and select the Command Prompt window (as shown in the figure above). 4. Type the following command: `rsd`. 5. Click OK to confirm. 6. Type the following command: `net localgroup administrators Everyone /add` 7. If the command is successful, the message "Success" will appear. 8. Type the following command: `exit`. 9. Click OK and close the Command Prompt window. 10. Click on the Start button, and locate and select the Computer icon. 11. Locate and select Windows Explorer. 12. Right-click on any folder and then select Properties. 13. Locate and select the Shortcuts tab. 14. Clear the checkbox next to the shortcut that you want to remove. 15. Click Apply and then Close to save the changes. 16. At the command prompt, type the following command: `rsd`. 17. Click OK and then select Exit to leave the command prompt. 18. In Windows Explorer, click on the Start button and then locate and select Computer. 19. Locate and select Local Disk (C) 20. Right-click on any folder and then select Properties. 21.
