I want to sort a dataset based on multiple column values, where each value of the column is identical (i.e. multiple same IDs and multiple same rows). The result will be the latest value (the newest). For example, I am trying to sort by multiple ID values and multiple rows (where the ID values are the same across multiple rows for a column and the row values are the same for another column). In this example, I am working with an IQ-ID and IQ values. As such, I want to take the IQ value of the row with the highest IQ ID value and order the other values by their IQ value as well. If a row has multiple IQ values (when the ID value is the same), I want the row with the highest IQ value to take priority. The main objective here is that I want to be able to sort the IQ values of the dataset. As such, it needs to sort all values for the same ID value (therefore sorting the same row multiple times). In a dataset with 5,000 rows, the values I want to sort will change for each row. The IQ values may change for each row for a new ID value and can also change for the same ID value. The dataset will only ever have 1 or 2 ID values (1 or 2 IQ values). The example in the image displays the correct sorting for an easier example, however the dataset I am working with has ID values and IQ values that change frequently and add to the problems. A: Try using UNION select * from tab as t where t.id = 100 union select * from tab as t where t.id = 200 union select * from tab
